Biography

Amanda Brennan is an Associate with a developing practice in the areas of corporate/commercial law and real estate. Before joining Miller Thomson as an Associate in 2021, Amanda summered and articulated with the firm.

Amanda received her Juris Doctorate degree with Distinction from the University of New Brunswick in 2020. Prior to law school, Amanda completed both an undergraduate and a graduate degree. She earned her undergraduate degree from McMaster University, where she graduated with Distinction and majored in both Political Science and Sociology. Amanda earned a Master of Arts degree in Political Science from Western University, where her primary research focus was Political Theory.

Following the completion of her graduate degree, Amanda worked in merchant services, where she garnered a great deal of experience providing client-focused solutions to both small and medium sized businesses.

Community involvement

Throughout law school, Amanda was actively involved in her community. She worked with Big Brothers Big Sisters of Fredericton, where she was a Big Sister in their School Mentorship Program. Amanda also worked with St. Thomas University, where she was a Peer Mentor and Teaching Assistant in their Criminology Department. In this role, Amanda served as a resource for undergraduate students as they engaged with course material and completed academic research.
