Annie Alport is an Associate in Miller Thomson's Administrative Law and Commercial Litigation practice groups. Annie primarily focuses on health law, construction, and commercial disputes. Annie's caseload includes cases involving hospital liability, public health enforcement, contract disputes, property disputes and general civil litigation. When disputes arise, Annie will review and provide her clients with sound legal advice, and will navigate her clients through the litigation process when necessary.

After working at another national law firm for two years, Annie worked as a Crown Prosecutor for the Province of Alberta in Fort McMurray. Annie has acted for a variety of corporate clients in her practice prior to joining the firm. She has a wide range of experience in advising clients in construction, oil and gas and private equity, as well as significant trial experience gained through her time with the Provincial Crown.

Annie began her legal career in Calgary after clerking at the Court of Appeal for Saskatchewan. She received her J.D. from the University of Saskatchewan in 2013 and was called to the bar in Alberta in 2014.
