BAR ADMISSION

Ontario, 2019

EDUCATION

- Juris Doctorate, Queen's University Faculty of Law, 2018
- Concurrent Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Education, University of Toronto, 2015

Hannah advocates for clients within the unique context of their family. She focuses on providing her clients with high quality service that is results-driven, efficient and child-centered. Hannah Rich is a fierce advocate. She has represented clients at the Superior Court of Justice and Divisional Court. As an advisor, she is practical and focused on facilitating efficient and favourable resolutions. Hannah represents clients in a wide range of family law disputes, including high net worth divorce, complex property and equalization issues, child and spousal support issues, domestic contracts, and high conflict decision making and parenting time issues.

Hannah seeks appropriate relief related to property issues, including obtaining expert reports from Certified Business Valuators where required, addressing issues related to the matrimonial home, and dealing with matters that touch upon other areas of the law, including corporate, tax, and estates. She acts for spouses and parents in assessing appropriate support that is owing or owed, including assessing complex income issues and imputation of income, and drafts cohabitation, marriage, and separation agreements. She also acts for parents in disputes concerning major decision making for their children (i.e. extracurricular activities, major medical decisions, religion, and school choice) and in disputes about determining parenting time schedules in a child's best interests.

Before joining Miller Thomson, Hannah articulated and summered at the Office of the Children's Lawyer where she represented child-clients in high conflict custody and access disputes and worked on some of the leading family law decisions. Before attending law school, Hannah was a certified teacher with the Ontario College of Teachers.
