Louis is co-Lead of Miller Thomson's Transportation & Logistics group and the go-to lawyer for those seeking responsive, strategic, and proactive legal counsel in the field of transportation law. Focusing on mergers and acquisitions and corporate governance, Louis has extensive experience navigating transactions on behalf of Canadian and international companies in the transport, logistics, automotive, pharmaceutical, technology, retail and manufacturing industries, among others. He is frequently consulted on matters of transport regulatory compliance, licensing and safety, assisting clients with operating procedures and contracting practices in the air, road and rail modes of transportation, as well as in the warehousing and logistics sectors. Manufacturers, importers, exporters and freight forwarders also turn to Louis for customs and trade advice on the movement of goods and services across international borders.

Louis's deep knowledge is not only showcased in his legal practice but also through his speaking engagements and educational contributions. Renowned for his insights, he shares his skills and experience on various platforms, covering topics ranging from trade policies to transportation trends, attesting to his commitment to continuous learning and sharing knowledge within the legal community.

Apart from his leadership in transportation law, Louis is a trusted advisor for companies on corporate structure, governance, and contractual negotiations. With a client-centered approach, Louis ensures that each step taken aligns with the client's best interests and long-term goals.
