Michael Gargaro is an active member of Miller Thomson's Advocacy group, with a focus on labour and employment, corporate/commercial litigation, and other litigation matters. With a diverse background, he skillfully navigates a wide range of litigation areas and has effectively represented clients in both negotiation and court appearances.

Prior to law school, Michael worked for the Department of National Defence as a Human Resources Coordinator, where he gained valuable experience managing human resource issues for large-scale organizations. This role equipped him with essential skills that add depth to his legal expertise.

During his time in law school, Michael volunteered with Pro Bono Students Canada, where he supported educational programs and provided free legal aid to children and youth involved in the Canadian legal system.
